

Dr. Tony Chahine is an optometrist with a specialty interest in contact lenses. He has a B.S. degree in Cybernetics from the University of California, Los Angeles (1991) and is a 1995 graduate of the University of California, Berkeley School of Optometry. Afterwards, he received Fellowship training in Contact Lenses at the Jules Stein Eye Institute, UCLA (1996). Dr. Chahine has since earned the title of Diplomate in the Section on Cornea, Contact Lenses and Refractive Technologies within the American Academy of Optometry (2007). He has a private practice in La Cañada, a suburb outside Los Angeles, where he specializes in difficult and specialty contact lens fittings.

While his practice strives to stay on the cutting edge, Dr. Chahine also has an interest in the history of optometry. He has a collection of antique eyeglasses, books and optometric instruments from the earliest days of optometry. On display at his office are 125 year old eye examination instruments, contact lenses from the 1930's and eyeglasses from the 1700's to the present.
